

VISION DOCTRINE

Created by:
Delaware Partners in Policymaking Class of 2003

In the year 2010 and beyond, people will not be judged by their differences, but by the content of their character.

People will live the way they want to live and be supported in the way they choose.

People will look outside their own lives to see the value in others and, in so doing, will create an environment of acceptance and support for all.

People will be seen as individuals and not placed in “cookie-cutter” roles.

In the Year 2010 and beyond people will:

- Live in the homes of their choosing
- Have a choice of educational opportunities for people of all ages
- Have access to their own money
- Have access to and choice of jobs
- Have the right to make mistakes
- Live in a world where universally designed environments will be the norm.
