

Did you know?

According to 2014 American Census data, there are 920,930 people living in the State of Delaware. Of that number, there are 101,862 Delawareans who have a disability and are over the legal voting age of 18. For more information on voting in Delaware for people with disabilities, please click here.

Voting is one of our most important rights and civic duties as citizens living in a democracy. For the disability community, it's important to continually challenge the barriers to voting and not be forgotten. When you participate in the election process, you help pave the path toward progress for people with disabilities.

